

BOLD VISIONS FOR PLANT PRODUCTION “BASICS TO INNOVATION”

The 2010 conference committee invites you to join us in Bellingham Washington for the 51st Western Region Conference of the International Plant Propagators Society.

This conference has something for everyone and we are looking forward to showing off the Pacific Northwest's skills in propagation and production.

We will be showcasing the diverse nurseries of the Skagit Valley and Whatcom Counties and featuring a wide range of speakers, native plants, parks and gardens, and local people that will combine to make this a conference no to be missed.

Features of this Conference:

- Pre-conference tour of the fertile Skagit Valley
- Two days of conference tours of Whatcom County
- Dan Hinkley, world renowned plant explorer is the banquet speaker
- Fabulous silent auction
- Nineteen speakers presenting their papers
- Expanded Nuggets of Knowledge and New Plant Sessions
- Lots of opportunities to network with your colleagues

Come experience the Pacific Northwest from the breath taking coastlines and mountains to its lush fields and forests the Evergreen State offers a spectacular backdrop for visitors.

The Location: Bellingham

Bellingham is a waterfront community on Bellingham Bay located 85 miles north of Seattle and 20 miles south of the Canadian border. It is the perfect starting point for visitors wishing to tour the San Juan Islands by ferry or heading north across the border to Vancouver, BC. The renovated old, historic buildings, views of the water and the mountain, and gorgeous sunsets make for a picture-postcard setting. Bellingham is one of those places you can enjoy visiting for a weekend or for a month. Whether you're into the arts, shopping, good food and wine, or wildlife watching, you'll find plenty of diversions. Bellingham and Whatcom County are particularly rich in opportunities to enjoy the outdoors, whether on a river, a lake, a forest, or on a mountain. And don't forget scenic Bellingham Bay, where you can take in a whale watching cruise or enjoy a kayak tour.
